

WHEW! IT'S HOTTER HERE THAN HOME AROUND EQUATOR

Governor-General Comes Perspiring From Tropics and
He Ought to Know.

A tall, distinguished looking foreigner with a bronzed face and a military bearing stood on the deck of the steamer Sarawaco of the Royal Dutch West India line as she swung up the Bay early this morning. He was indistinctly wiping the perspiration from his face and trying to maintain his dignity despite the handicap of a tilted collar, which he had unbuttoned in front. He was Gov.-Gen. Dirk Fock of Dutch Guiana, bound for a rest in his home in Holland, and he freely confessed that nothing like the hot weather which he encountered has been experienced in the tropics whence he came in the last three years.

"This heat—it is terrible," he said. "It is so oppressive, I have not been so uncomfortable in three years, and I have been living close to the equator. I suppose it is the moisture in the air that makes me feel so disagreeable. Really, I would prefer the tropics to a residence here in the summer."

Governor-General Fock, who is accompanied by his wife, was formerly Minister of the Colonies for the Netherlands. His three years' residence in Surinam, Dutch Guiana, has not been very exciting, he said this morning. Things don't happen down in that part of the world with the alarming frequency and relentless rush of incident found in the romantic stories of American novelists, he said.

"It is just dull," said the Governor-General, "just stupidly dull. We had a trace of excitement about a year ago when Francisus Killinger, an Austrian inspector of police, tried to stir up a revolution, but we stopped that right away. Killinger is now serving five years in prison. It was very short, very short and fleeting."

There seemed to be almost a note of regret in the Governor-General's voice as he said this. The Sarawaco docked at 8:15 and the Governor-General and his wife were taken in a tug around to the pier of the Holland-American line, where they took the Potsdam, which sailed for Europe at 10 A. M. The courtesies of the port were extended them by Collector Loeb and the transfer was made on time.

HEIRESS TO MILLIONS SUES AGAIN TO GET ESTATE.

Mrs. Julia Watt Curtiss-Lawrence Says Income Is Denied Her and Wants Conservator Removed.

The culmination of a legal battle waged for more than three years in the courts of New York and Connecticut came yesterday when counsel for Mrs. Julia Watt Curtiss-Lawrence, one of three heirs to the $50,000 estate left by Miss Mary G. Pinkney, appeared before Judge Bradley in the Probate Court in Westport, Conn., and presented a motion that Probate Judge Elmore S. Banks of Fairfield County be removed, on the grounds of public policy, as conservator of the person and property of Mrs. Lawrence. In the argument made by a representative of L. Lillian Kelling, Mrs. Lawrence's attorney, it was charged that every action thus far instituted in the case in Connecticut has been brought upon him by Judge Banks himself.

Perhaps the most important charge made by counsel for Mrs. Lawrence is that while she is absolutely sane and able to conduct her business affairs she has been deprived of any part of her income of $60,000 annually for the past four years.

If the court, who adjourned the hearing until this morning, rules against the motion, an appeal to the Superior Court will be taken.
